1. Overview

Advanced Deckhand – Fishing (ADH-F) certificate of proficiency

This guideline is for new applicants for the certificate of proficiency for Advanced Deckhand – Fishing (ADH-F). It does not cover recognition of an equivalent certificate obtained outside New Zealand.

The information in this guideline covers sea service, training and other requirements for the certificate, how to apply and pay for your certificate, and where to find more information.

Once you have your ADH-F certificate, it does not expire and will not need to be renewed.

The ADH-F certificate is issued under Subpart D of Maritime Rules Part 32 – National (STCW-F aligned) Certificates. It corresponds with a certificate issued under Resolution 4 of the International Convention on the Standards of Training, Certification and Watchkeeping for Fishing Vessel Personnel (STCW-F).

With this certificate, you can perform the functions and duties of deckhand on fishing vessels of any length in any operating area.

Disclaimer

These guidelines provide information and explanations about the requirements set out in the maritime rules, but are not a substitute for the rules themselves, which are the law. These guidelines refer to provisions in the Maritime Rules Part 32, Seafarer Certification. The Director of Maritime New Zealand will grant a certificate only when satisfied that all requirements have been met.

In this guideline, any references to 'we' or Maritime New Zealand relating to a decision about the issue or renewal of any seafarer certificate are references to the Director or a person acting under the Director's delegated authority.

2. Requirements

Before you spend time doing sea service and training, we recommend you check that you can meet the medical fitness and eyesight standards (including for colour vision), and that you understand the fit and proper person requirements.

A summary of the requirements for this certificate is provided below. You need to meet all of these requirements to get your ADH-F certificate.

- prove you have met the minimum sea service requirements
- complete and pass the approved qualification for ADH-F
- have the required ancillary certificates
- pass Maritime NZ's final exam
- prove that you are a fit and proper person
- be medically fit and have good eyesight
- be at least 16 years old.

Each of these requirements and how to prove that you meet them is explained below.

You must also have English conversation, reading and writing skills appropriate to the responsibilities and functions for the level of your certificate, so that you can satisfactorily complete training, pass examinations and discharge your duties.

2. Requirements (continued)

2.1 Prior certification and qualifications

No prior certification or qualifications are required for this certificate of competency.

2.2 Sea service

Your sea service must be relevant and appropriate to the requirements set out in the maritime rules.

In practice, this means that your sea service must be aboard fishing vessels operating beyond enclosed water limits.

Sea service requirements

The sea service requirement is a minimum of six months.

All of your sea service must have been completed in the 10 years before your certificate is issued.

Proving your sea service

You are responsible for making sure your sea service is documented and verified by your ship's master or company.

To prove your sea service, you must provide at least one of the following documents for each vessel you have served on:

- certificate of sea service or record of employment (available on Maritime NZ's website)
- completed seafarer's record book
- discharge certificate or discharge book (if using a New Zealand discharge book, make sure you get the watchkeeping signed off)
- a letter from your employer.

Each of the documents you provide for each vessel must contain:

- your employer's name and contact details
- the name, overall length and type of vessel (for example, passenger, non-passenger, fishing)
- the area of operation
- the dates you were employed and the sea time completed
- your duties.

Any statutory declarations you have made are generally not acceptable as proof of your sea service. However, the Director will consider these in exceptional circumstances.

2. Requirements (continued)

Calculating sea service for voyages of 24 hours or more

Relevant qualifying sea service is expected to be on voyages of 24 hours or more, calculated as follows:

- from the sign-on date of starting work on the ship to the sign-off date of discharge (both dates are inclusive)
- by counting each whole calendar month during this period as one month
- for multiple voyages, by adding together extra days that do not fall within a calendar month, with each addition of 30 days to be calculated as one month.

Extended time in port is generally not counted as sea service, and nor is time on leave.

Note

Voyage means a voyage between a port or place of departure and a ship's final port or place of arrival. It includes any period of 24 hours (or more) where you are signed on or employed on the vessel and you remain on board.

For example: If your service record shows your sign-on date as 3 March and sign-off date as 14 April, your sea service would be calculated as one month (3 March to 2 April) and 12 days (from 3 to 14 April inclusive).

Calculating sea service for voyages of less than 24 hours

Sea service on voyages of less than 24 hours is calculated by counting the number of months made up of days, as follows:

- by counting each period of eight (or more) hours worked within each period of 24 hours as one day's service
- by counting periods of more than eight hours at a rate of more than one day (may be expressed in decimal points) at the Director's discretion, if the Director is satisfied that there are suitable policies and processes in place to manage fatigue
- by counting each additional 20 days (or more) in one month as one month's sea service.

In cases where sea service is accrued and recorded in hours (for example, day work):

- each additional 160 hours (or more) in one month counts as one month's sea service
- where insufficient hours are accrued in a period of 30 days, additional hours may be accrued until 160 hours have been reached. This can then be counted as one month's sea service.

You cannot claim for more days of sea service than you actually served. Extended time in port is generally not counted as sea service, and nor is time on leave.

For more information about calculating your sea service, refer to the Maritime NZ website:

maritimenz.govt.nz/seafarers

Sea service pre-assessment

If you are unsure about whether you have met the sea service requirements, you can ask us to assess your sea service time before you make your full application. To have your sea service pre-assessed, you need to:

- apply for pre-assessment using MNZ's pre-assessment form
- send us the documents we need (see Proving your sea service above) in order to check your sea service.

Note

If you are pre-assessed and have the required sea service for the ADH-F certificate, add your pre-assessment reference number to your seafarer certificate application form.

2.3 Training

You must complete training that is acceptable to the Director of Maritime NZ to achieve all of the required competencies for this certificate as set out in the Annex to Resolution 4 of the STCW-F convention.

Approved training

The approved training qualification for ADH-F is the New Zealand Certificate in Fishing Vessel Crewing (Level 3). This certificate is available through the following providers:

You may use another training record book developed by a training provider, provided that the book has been approved by the Director of Maritime NZ.

The training record book is designed to help you obtain practical skills and competencies for the ADH-F certificate in a workplace environment. This training will complement the shore-based training that you must undertake before sitting the final examination.

Your training record book will be assessed by your training provider.

You must provide the original of your training record book to an Maritime NZ-approved Examiner before you take your final exam.

Your training record book needs to:

- be the original, not a copy
- be completed while carrying out your sea service
- have all relevant records completed
- have all relevant project work completed and signed off by the ship's master or a qualified certificated officer, as indicated in the book.

Keep your training record book in a safe place. We also recommend you make a copy of the completed sections and the associated evidence, storing these in a safe place too – but separately from your training record book.
